VICIOUS DOGS GET AFTER MAIL CARRIERS

Such is the Experience of the Mail Carriers of Gainesville.

HIS SEAT OF PANTS EATEN

Carrier Rowe Has Been Trying to Make Friends With an East Gainesville Dog, but the Dog Won't Play. Postmaster Arnow on Situation.

There is going to be trouble between the United States government, the mail carriers in the employ of the United States government and the owners of what are termed as "vicious dogs," if some action is not taken soon in the matter of tying these dogs up or confining them in the back yards of premises where carriers are compelled to go to deliver mail.

Carrier D. W. Rowe, whose duty it is to deliver mail daily on certain routes leading to East Gainesville, declared to Postmaster Arnow Tuesday that he would give up his job before he would deliver mail at a certain house in East Gainesville, where he states a vicious dog has almost eaten the seat of his trousers out, as a result of various attacks. Carrier Rowe has stood this thing as long as possible, and says he has tried to make friends with the dog, but objects to being compelled to enter with a club in one hand and the mail for the family in another, and fight his way both in and out of the yard.

"I love my job and need it, but I just won't stand this risk any longer," he remarked to Postmaster Arnow upon returning from his route Tuesday. "That dog would have grabbed me in a minute if it had not been for the fact that I kept him off with a stick, and I won't stand it a minute longer."

Postmaster Arnow states that the postal regulations do not require carriers to enter yards or premises where vicious dogs are permitted to run at large. "I think it unfair to ask it of them," he said, "and I propose to instruct the carriers to stay out of such places. If people want to enjoy the privilege of free mail delivery they must keep their dogs tied up or in the rear premises, where the carriers will not be subjected to being bitten. I am willing and anxious to accommodate the public in the free distribution of mail, but I am not willing to force carriers to run the risk of being jumped on and bitten by dogs. Persons having such dogs must either tie them up or keep them in their back yards if they desire their mail delivered at their doors."

Section 756, Postal Laws and Regulations, says:

"Carriers are not required to deliver mail at residences where vicious dogs are permitted to run at large. Persons keeping such dogs must call at the postoffice for their mail."
